Captain Strong Wanted On A Serious Charge.

Is Said To Have Stolen Jewels From May Yoke.

Safe Deposit Vanits Opened And Gems Worth $250,000 Taken.

New York, July 21.—A formal complaint of grand larceny was made against former captain, Putnam Bradley Strong this evening, by May Yoke, former wife of Lord Francis Hope, who appeared at police headquarters accompanied by her mother and her lawyer and there charged Strong, who recently disappeared from his home at Hastings, with the theft of jewels which she values at $250,000. Her complaint was entertained and a general alarm was sent out for the arrest of Strong.

Miss Yoke's counsel said that the safes of the Knickerbocker Safe Deposit company, where Miss Yoke had kept her jewels, were opened today, and it was found that her jewels, valued at $250,000 had been removed. He also explained that pawn tickets calling for one hundred thousand dollars' worth of the missing gems had been recovered.

FIFTY DROWNED.
Frightful Accident To Excursion Steamer In Prussia.

Hamburg, July 21.—The steamship Primus, owned by the Hamburg-American line, with 185 passengers on board, was cut in two and sunk by the tug Hansa, on the river Elbe at 12.30 o'clock this morning. So far as ascertained about fifty persons were drowned. Thirteen bodies already have been recovered.

The Primus was an excursion steamer from Buxtehude, province of Hanover, Prussia.

Among the passengers were members of the Ellbeck Male Choral society. At the time of the accident, the Primus was crossing the river channel near Blankenese, from the southern into the northern fairway. According to witnesses aboard the Hansa, the movement was made too precipitately. The Primus struck the tug's engine room and the Hansa endeavored to push her ashore, but the tug grounded soon and the ships parted. The Primus then sank.

In the interval, however, about fifty persons were able to reach the Hansa by means of ropes and ladders. Seventy more were picked up by the tug's boats while others swam ashore.

Stories Of Survivors.
Hamburg, July 21.—Some survivors from the Primus furnish graphic descriptions of the awful suddenness of the disaster. According to their stories, the band was playing and many couples were dancing on deck when the crash of the collision came, like a thunderbolt. In the midst of the confusion, the boilers exploded, adding to the horror of the scene, and many persons are said to have been injured by flying splinters of metal.

It is asserted that divers have already recovered forty-five bodies, but it is as yet impossible to verify the death list. It is believed that when the vessel is floated, other bodies may be found.

AGAIN POSTPONED.
Hearing On Case Of Martin A. Glass Will Not Take Place Till Aug. 25.

The postponement was made because of the continued inability of the defendant's mother, who is still confined to her room from the injuries inflicted by her son, to appear in court.

FATHER KILLS SON.
Claims, However, That He Acted In Self Defense.

Chicago, July 21.—In a desperate battle with his fifteen year old son, William, who was armed with a heavy sledge hammer and is said to have been the aggressor, Patrick McCann, seventy-five years old, shot and killed the boy last night at their home, 213 West Kinsey street.

According to the story told by the father, the trouble arose over a quarrel between William and his younger brother. Ordered to leave the house, the boy defied his father, who attempted to put the lad out by force. Thereupon the boy seized a heavy sledge hammer and assumed the offensive, driving the older man into the bedroom, where he shut the door and took a revolver from a bureau drawer. Just as he picked up the weapon the door of the room was burst open by a blow from the hammer, and the boy rushed in and began striking wildly at him. After receiving three scalp wounds from glancing blows, the father in self-defense shot his son dead. The elder McCann was taken to the hospital, where he is guarded by a policeman.

It is reported that a number of traders, who were unable to escape from the natives there, have been captured by the natives, who cut up and burned their bodies.

FELT AS A CALAMITY.

The sad accident at the Isles of Shoals whereby a large number of young people were drowned is felt as a calamity in this city, where several of the victims of the accident were well known. In such an event it is hard to refrain from severely criticising some one, yet in the present case apparently no one was at fault. It was an accident brought about by circumstances which might not arise in a hundred similar instances. There is always more or less danger in an excursion of that kind, although, on the whole, such accidents are extremely rare.—Lawrence Daily Eagle.

STATE AGENT INVESTIGATING.

John H. Elkins, agent of the state fish and game commission, has been in Hampton for the past few days in investigating the report of the killing of a deer. These animals have been particularly numerous about Hampton of late and it appears that last Friday a resident there was watching one by the aid of a field glass as it was grazing on the marshes. Suddenly there was a puff of smoke, the deer dropped in its tracks, the report of a rifle was heard, and then two men were seen to approach and drag the animal away. The authorities were notified, and they informed Mr. Elkins of the facts of the case. No clue has yet been obtained as to the identity of the men, but if captured they will be prosecuted, as they are liable to a heavy fine as well as imprisonment.

THESE NEW DRY DOCKS.

Secretary Moody Anxious To Have Them Completed.

Magnificent One At This Yard Needed For Big Battleships.

A Lot Of Repair Work Is To Be Sent Here Shortly.

Secretary Moody is very anxious to have the dry docks now building here and at Charlestown completed at the earliest possible moment. Both are badly needed by the navy department.

Work on this dock is going along finely and to the entire satisfaction of the department, but operations have been lagging so sadly at Charlestown that Secretary Moody has transferred the contract to the City Securities and Trust company of Philadelphia, with orders to hurry things up.

The number of vessels now afloat makes it imperative that dry docks shall be at all times available for battleships, and at the present time there is only one dock on the Atlantic coast, No. 3, at the New York navy yard, capable of taking a first-class battleship.

It is the intention of Secretary Moody, when construction begins on the new battleship at the New York navy yard, to preserve the equilibrium by sending as much repair work as possible to the Portsmouth and Boston yards, but of course it is impossible to do that until those yards have docks capable of receiving the largest battleships afloat.

That is one of the reasons why he is pushing work on the Charlestown dock, and why he is so anxious to have both that and the one here completed with the least delay possible.

The purpose of the secretary to send as much repair work as possible to the Portsmouth yard will be good news to the shipworkers and mechanics of this city, as it will insure them a continuance of work.

PRESERVED BY WAX

FOUR HISTORIC PAINTINGS IN THE NATIONAL CAPITOL.

They Were Treated Long After Completion and When They Already Showed Signs of Disintegration—An Artist's Curious Blunder.

It is a curious fact that the same combination of elements which preserved in a perfect state for over 500 years the remains and shrouds of King Edward I. of England have also been used to preserve four of the great historical paintings representing scenes in the foundation and establishment of this government.

These four paintings occupy perhaps the most conspicuous place for observation in the nation. They are the work of Colonel John Trumbull and hang on the eastern wall of the rotunda of the capitol.

The paintings were put in place in 1824 under the supervision of the artist himself, but not without much hesitation and objections on his part because of the dampness of the walls and air in the rotunda at that time. The fears of the artist were proved to be well founded, for four years later the changes on the surface of the paintings became so apparent that congress passed a resolution authorizing their removal from the walls of the rotunda by Colonel Trumbull for inspection and remedy if possible. It was at this point that Colonel Trumbull's knowledge of the preservative chemical compound was drawn on.

In a letter to congress, dated Dec. 9, 1828, Colonel Trumbull explains in detail his treatment of the paintings at that time, and an inspection now of these four pictures shows that they are in a perfect state of preservation both as to brightness of color and condition of canvas.

In the letter referred to Colonel Trumbull says: "All of the paintings were taken down, removed from their frames, taken off from the panels over which they were strained, removed to a dry, warm room and there separately and carefully examined. The material which forms the basis of the paintings is a linen cloth whose strength and texture are very similar to those in the topgallant sails of a ship of war. The substances employed in forming a proper surface for the artist, together with the colors, oils, etc., form a sufficient protection for the face of the canvas, but the back remains bare and exposed to the deleterious effects of damp air. The effect of this is first seen in the form of mildew. It was this which I dreaded, and the examination showed that mildew was already commenced and to an extent which rendered it manifest that the continuance of the same exposure for a few years longer would have accomplished the complete decomposition or rotting of the canvas and the consequent destruction of the paintings."

Colonel Trumbull then explained how he first thoroughly dried the canvases and prepared them for the preservative. On this point he continues: "I had learned that a few years ago some of the eminent chemists of France had examined with great care some of the ancient mummies of Egypt with a view to ascertaining the nature of the substance employed by the embalmers which the lapse of so many ages had proved to possess the power of protecting from decay a substance otherwise so perishable as the human body. This examination had proved that, after the application of liquid asphaltum to the cavities of the head and body, the whole had been wrapped carefully in many envelopes or bandages of linen prepared with wax. The committee of chemists decided further, after a careful examination and analysis of the hieroglyphic paintings with which the casings, etc., are covered, that the colors employed and still retaining their vivid brightness had also been prepared and applied with the same substance."

"I also know that toward the close of the last century the Antiquarian Society of England had been permitted to open and examine the stone coffin deposited in one of the vaults of Westminster abbey and said to contain the body of King Edward I., who died in July, 1307. On removing the stone lid of the coffin its contents were found to be closely enveloped in a strong linen cloth, waxed. Within this envelope were found splendid robes of silk, a rich velvet cap and various ornaments covering the body, which was found to be entire and to have been wrapped carefully in all its parts, even to each separate finger, in bandages of the finest which had been in a good and moist way, and not only was the body not decayed, but the various parts of the dress, such as a skirt, a ruff, a mantle and a velvet piece of garment which was placed over the face, were in perfect preservation, even in their colors."

A curious collection of books is contained in the library of Warsteinstein, near Cassel, in Germany. The books appear at first sight to be books of wood, but each volume is really a complete history of the tree it represents. The bark, shows the bark, in which a small place is cut to write the scientific and common name as a title. One side shows the tree trunk in its natural state, and the other is polished and varnished. Inside are shown the leaves, fruit, flower and insect parasite, to which is added a full description of the tree and its products.

A Matter of Fact.
"Do you see the London yonder, where the sky seems to meet the earth?"
"Yes, uncle."
"Boy, I have journeyed so near there that I couldn't put a sixpence between my head and the sky!"
"Why, uncle, what a whopper!"
"It's a fact, my lad. I hadn't one to put." London Tid Bits.

A Excellent Explanation.
"Why is a woman honest, now why is a wife cross?"
"Before marriage she was an I. After marriage she learned on another I, and they formed an X. Of course she's cross, and so are you, I'll bet." New York Times.

Benefit your friends, that they may love you more dearly still. Benefit your enemies, that they may at last become your friends.
A boy is usually ready to cut every man he plays. Atchison Globe.

WHILE WE SLEEP.

The Muscles and Organs of the Body Are Still Working.

If the organs of the body cannot be said to sleep, neither can the voluntary muscles. Witness the phenomena of sleepwalking, the postillions in stage-coach days who slept in their saddles and cavaliers who do it today, infantry who have been known to sleep on armed marches, sentries who walk their beats carrying their guns in a fixed position while they sleep. For all we know policemen may do it too. People who talk in their sleep are familiar to all of us. Experiments made by Stock, Armstrong and Child on 200 college students of both sexes showed that 47 per cent of the men and 37 per cent of the women talked in their sleep. A number of things might be proved by these statistics. Of these sleep talkers one-half of the women and one-third of the men are able to answer questions while asleep. More women than men could answer questions on any subject, not alone that of which they had been talking. It has also been found that most sleep talkers are under twenty-five years of age.

Evidently, then, with the muscles and organs of the body all working, it is the brain only that sleeps, and by no means all of the brain. The senses of sight, hearing, touch, smell and taste may be very much awake while the subject sleeps. A sleeping person hears and answers questions, rearranges his bedclothing, covers his eyes to keep out the light, draws away his hand when the experimenter tickles it. A child is broken of the habit of sucking his thumb while asleep by putting a piece of cotton in it. He is conscious of the bitter taste and dreams of woodwork. The nerves, then, and the brain centers corresponding to them are awake. A busy lawyer, exhausted by overwork, one night went out to supper with some friends, ate, talked and walked with them, and the next day remembered absolutely nothing of the occurrence. He had not been drinking. The man was simply asleep during the whole evening. His conscious memory—that is, consciousness itself—slept.—Aluslee's Magazine.

FLOWER AND TREE.

Fruit trees and fruit require potash for their best development.

With house plants all extreme changes of temperature should be avoided.

No many trees prevent rapid growth and extend the time when a grove is well shaded.

Grapevines like their roots to be near the surface, and the food for them should not be placed at too great a depth.

Small growth and too much small fruit go together. Thrifty growth furnishes a few large and true specimens of fruit.

There is no use in growing a tree very tall. The top limbs are apt to become slender and break if fruit is produced on them.

All members of the poppy family are hard to transplant. By choosing a rainy day and not exposing the roots one can sometimes manage a transplant.

Avoid straight lines as much as possible. There is no straight line in nature. It is for this reason that groups and masses are so much better than formal or set beds.

What Puzzled Louis.

Louis Philippe was a wit. What he specially excelled in was the clinching of an argument, such as, for instance, his final remark on the death of Talleyrand. He had paid him a visit the day before. When the news of the prince's death was brought to him, he said, "Are you sure he is dead?" "Very sure, sir," was the answer. "Why, did not your majesty himself inform me yesterday that he was dying?" "I did, but there is no judging from appearances with Talleyrand, and I have been asking myself for the last four and twenty hours what interest he could possibly have in departing at this particular moment."

No Smoking.

There is one country in the world where it is considered a crime to smoke. Abyssinia. The law forbidding tobacco dates from the year 1612. It was at first merely intended to prevent people from smoking in the churches, but it was taken too literally, and nowadays even foreigners have to be careful not to be seen smoking.

Conceded It.

"There's a burglar in the house, Ben-Jamin," said Mr. Pratt, arousing her husband in the dead of the morning. "Heir that?" she continued. "It's sure the sound of a child. He's a safe burglar."

Couldn't Improve the Method.

A MAN AGAINST A NATION.

The Most Curious European War That Ever Was Waged.

The most curious European war ever waged was that which in the sixteenth century, the period of the reformation and the renaissance, was carried on single handed for between five and six years between a bankrupt grocer of Berlin and the elector of Saxony, who was the most powerful German prince of the period. The grocer's name was Hans Kolihase, and the immediate cause of the quarrel was the arresting of two of his horses in the elector's territory, he being a subject of the elector of Brandenburg. Failing to get redress, he adopted what was then a perfectly legal expedient and declared formal war on the realm of Saxony. The declaration was accepted in due form, and the war began.

The extraordinary part of the story is that the grocer kept the war up for nearly six years practically single handed and even went to the extremity of declaring war on his own sovereign in the meantime before he was caught. He burned farms and even villages, employed mercenaries after the fashion of the times and made himself the terror of the district. He was finally influenced to stop hostilities by Luther, and after he had taken the sacrament from his hands he was betrayed into a further act of hostility by treachery and, being captured, suffered death on the wheel after refusing an act of grace which granted him the painless and honorable death of the sword. The story is perhaps the strangest of all the romances of that romantic age.

He Saw the Joke.

Here is a true story of a curious personality well known to many professional men in London today: He is a Scot, whose business ability is above the average, but everything he does is done with the air of a man constantly wrestling with some problem of the soul. He rarely speaks unless spoken to. He never smiles, and his eyes have a fixed but intense expression. One day he was returning to London with several companions. The whole party were Scotch, but the companions were of general type. One of them told a humorous tale, over which the rest laughed uproariously. Not so the human problem. He sat in a corner of the railway carriage gazing at his faithful friends. Half an hour afterward, however, when all were standing at a street corner before separating he took one aside and said solemnly and slowly: "Ye would observe that I did na' laugh at yond' story. Well, I saw the joke. Ye might not think it, but I have a keen sense of humor."—London News.

An Impossible Task.

The committee waited upon the successful man.

"Your fame has preceded you," they said as he entered the room. He smiled serenely. "I am rather well known," he admitted modestly.

"You have given names to sleeping cars, new cigars, health foods and games—names that have pleased the public and your patrons?"

The successful man bowed. "Well," said the spokesman, "we have a new baby at our house, and we have come to you to select a name that will please her parents, sisters and brothers, grandparents, cousins, uncles, aunts and friends of the family and herself later on."

The successful man frowned sternly. "Sir," he said, "I do not undertake the impossible."—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

Telling the Weather From Mist.

The notion of mists, rapid or slow, was regarded as one of the best methods of foretelling the approach of rain or snow. When there was a mist before the rise of the full moon, if clouds were seen in the west before the sun rose or there was a mist in the fields before sunrise, wet weather was expected. When the mists vanished rapidly and the moon seemed to rise faster than usual, fine weather was sure to gladden the hearts of the merry makers on the succeeding day. When the winds changed and the clouds flew along on "rail," the farmers predicted a storm.

Railroad Time Folders.

The average person who picks up a railroad time folder does not realize the enormous amount of work which the preparation of such a publication involves.

The big Burlington system, for instance, has a general time folder made up from sixteen different division time tables. The folder contains 2,000 names of towns, gives the schedules of over 500 trains, and whenever there is a change in time 60,000 figures have to be carefully checked and corrected.

Life In New York.

Nobody living outside New York knows how difficult it has become in that city for people of moderate means to bring up their children in the love of genuine things. It is still done by many, but with increasing effort and only by dint of a strong will and an inheritance of the truest graces of life—simplicity, the domestic affections and the love of nature and one's kind. It is to the cultivation of these graces that we must look for a rescue from the artificial and the vulgarity of the pitiable crowd in every American city known as "the smart set."—Century.

JEALOUSY AND PRIDE.

Through One Writer's Spectacles These Two Appear as Virtues.

There is a little jealousy in all persons and especially in all women. It springs from deep love, which always desires to be first in the affection of the one beloved. A lover, whether man or maid, who is not susceptible to occasional twinges of jealousy is not truly in love.

While jealousy, considered with reference to its origin, is but an ignominious emotion, it is frequently absurd in its outbreaks. A father is sometimes upset with jealousy because he imagines that his wife loves the children more than she loves him. Mothers are frequently jealous of the husbands or wives of their daughters or sons. Wives become jealous of the sisters or mothers of their husbands. No one is immune against the little green bacilli of jealousy.

Generally the tears or frowns of jealousy are swept away with a few kind words and a caress, but there are some unhappy persons whose jealousy is chronic and who make themselves ridiculous and annoying by their fits and storms of jealous passion. The jealousy of such persons is beyond reason. Indeed, it is a form of dementia which begets every sort of violence.

Pride is the strongest controller of jealousy. The theologians reckon pride among the seven deadly sins, but as a matter of fact pride is at the bottom of much of the virtuous action in the world. Pride is the root of most bravery, fortitude, courtesy, magnanimity, humility and industry. Pride is the essential spirit of thorough breeding, and in spite of being enumerated among the deadly sins pride is not connected with turpitude.—San Francisco Bulletin.

ONE MAN'S FINE CONCEIT.

Measuring of Men, He Says, Means Strength; of Women, Bonnets.

"It's an odd thing about women," remarked Jones to his wife as he settled himself for a special effort. "We admire you intensely in the individual. We adore you when taken singly, but it's a strange, and fact that when a few hundred of you get together you lose distinction. A multitude of rare women brought together in one building for a common cause are far from venerable. Look at Socrates. The club is undoubtedly made up of ideal mothers and wives, but one resolutely refuses to find it anything else than a convocation of bonnets. Earnest, intense women recruit the ranks of the Woman's Christian Temperance union, but its mass meetings only amuse the rest of the world. An exclusively feminine tone was never an object of envy to those who pass it by."

"And what of you men?" suggested Mrs. Jones. "Are you all so much finer in a crowd?"

"Undoubtedly," replied Jones. "It isn't open to dispute that a 'gang' of men is at all times convincing. If it is only a mob with a rope looking up a criminal, the sight does not lack impressiveness. The imagination plays about a 'smoker' and speculates as to the quality of the cigars and the stories. And a good share of the world's work has been done by men in mass for a purpose. Union to us is strength, and the novelist has always remained below when the door of the language hall was opened for the filing out of the ladies."—New York Tribune.

Small Things That Count.

It is said that Caesar chose his generals according to the length of their forefingers in comparison with that of their second fingers. No man whose forefinger was over one-eighth of an inch shorter than his middle finger had a ghost of a show. Men with very short forefingers are supposed to be effeminate. I believe it is so. Napoleon's generals were selected by their noses. Cromwell believed that knogged men made the best soldiers. Washington preferred men with high cheek bones. Breeding foreheads were the rule among his generals. Alexander the Great judged men by their teeth, those having very large canines being preferred as commanders.—New York Press.

Shifting the Responsibility.

An Irishman who traded in small wares kept a donkey cart, with which he visited the different villages. On one occasion he came to a bridge where a toll was levied.

He found to his disappointment he had not enough money to pay it. A bright thought struck him. He unharnessed the donkey and put it into the cart. Then, getting between the shafts himself, he pulled the cart with the donkey standing in it on to the bridge.

In due course he was hailed by the toll collector.

"Heey, man!" cried the latter. "Whaur's your toll?"

"Begorra," said the Irishman, "just ask the droiver."

Tanned and the Text.

The golden text for a certain Sunday school was, "And the child grew and waxed strong in spirit" (Luke II, 40).

Little Ted's hand went up like a flash when the superintendent asked: "Can any of these bright, smiling little boys or girls repeat the golden text for today? Ah, how glad it makes my heart to see so many little hands go up! Teddy, my boy, you may repeat it, and speak good and loud that all may hear."

And they all heard this: "And the child grew and waxed strong in spirit like 2:40."

He Swung the Lantern.

A southern senator was at one time counsel for a small railroad. At a point on the line where it crossed a prominent highway they had an old negro watchman, whose duties consisted in warning travelers of the approach of trains. One night a farmer's wagon was struck, causing a bad accident. The railroad company was of course sued for damages, and at the trial the old dandy was the chief witness for his employers. He answered the questions put to him in a clear, direct manner. Among them was the query as to whether he surely swung his lantern across the road when he saw the train coming, to which he replied:

"Deed I did, sah."

The railroad company won the suit, and the senator took occasion later to compliment his witness on his excellent testimony. The old fellow was profuse in thanks, but before they parted blurted out:

The Perfect Head.

A perfect head, viewed from the side, falls within a perfect square, averaging nine inches for a man and 8½ inches for a woman. The width of the face is equal to five eyes. The distance between the eyes is equal to one eye. The size of the eye is two-thirds that of the mouth. The length of the nose is one-third the length of the face. The ear is, at all ages, as long as two eyes. Although these are the ideal measurements and are approximately adhered to, so fond of irregularity is nature that rarely any face corresponds to them. The two sides of any face are never exactly alike. Strictly speaking, the face extends only from the chin to the root of the nose. Above that point is the brain case. For a well developed brain the width of the head just above the ears, measured with callipers, should be from 5½ to 6½ inches, and the height from the opening of the ear to the top of the crown should be exactly the same. In women both height and width are one inch less than in men, women's heads approaching the type belonging to children.—London Magazine.

A Great Work of Art.

It was Apelles who visited the studio of Protogenes in Rome and, finding the artist absent, drew a thin colored line in such a way that the Roman knew that only his Grecian brother could have done it. But, not to be outdone, Protogenes drew a thinner line upon that of Apelles, and when this was seen Apelles drew a third line upon that of Protogenes. This panel was then looked upon as the greatest work of art, so says the story, in the palace of the Caesars.

Easy Enough.

The New Arrival and the Experienced Maid are the dramatic personae of a brief comedy published in Life. The New Arrival was in doubt about the use of the blower on the open fireplace.

"When will it be time to take this blower off?"

"Leave it alone," replied the Experienced Maid, "till it do too hot for yez to touch; then lift it off."

A Well Satisfied Girl.

At an old fashioned revival meeting the minister approached Minnie, who was only ten years old, and urged her to go forward to the "sinners' bench" for prayers, as many of her young friends had done.

"No, thank you," said Minnie, holding back.

"But why?" questioned the minister. "Don't you want to be born again?"

"No," replied Minnie. "I'm afraid I might be born a boy next time!"—Brooklyn Life.

HARDY SUWAROFF.

Peculiarities of One of Russia's Great Military Commanders.

Suwaroff, Russia's great military commander, was a little man, bald-headed in everything but that intangible power of mind and character with which physical strength is never to be compared. He had been sickly in his youth, but became hardy under the stimulus of cold bathing and the benefits of a plain diet. Buckets of cold water were thrown over him in the morning, and his table was served with fare which guests would fain have refused, but dared not lest he should think them effeminate. He despised dress and delighted in drilling his men in shirt sleeves, sometimes with his stockings literally "down at the heel."

But his hardihood of life and action had its effect on the men he commanded. He was often up and about by midnight and would salute the first soldier whom he saw moving with a piercing cockerow in commendation of his early rising. During the first Polish war he had given orders for an attack at cockerow, and a spy in the camp carried the news to the enemy. The attack, however, really took place at 9 o'clock in the evening, when the arrangement had been made, for Suwaroff, suspecting treachery, had then turned out his troops by his well known crowing. The enemy, expecting the event in the morning, were entirely unprepared and fell easy victims to his forethought.

"Tomorrow morning," said he to his troops on the evening before the storming of Ismail, "an hour before day-break I mean to get up. I shall wash and dress myself, say my prayers, give one good cockerow and then capture Ismail."

Curious Translation Errors.

Some amusing errors are made by translators. An Italian paper turned Kipling's "Absentminded Beggar" into a "Distracted Mendicant." Another Italian editor who translated a passage from an English paper about a man who had killed his wife with a poker added an ingenious footnote to say, "We do not know with certainty whether this thing 'poker' be a domestic or surgical instrument." The desperate expedient of the French translator of Cooper's "Spy," who had to explain how a horse could be hitched "to a locust," is worth recalling. He had never heard of locust trees and rendered the word by "sauterelle," or grasshopper. Feeling that this needed some explanation, he appended a footnote explaining that grasshoppers grew to a gigantic size in the United States and that it was the custom to place a stuffed specimen at the door of every mansion for the convenience of visitors, who hitched their horses to it.

The Bluejay.

One may pet or patronize, according to one's nature, a chipping sparrow, bluebird or phoebe, but he is indeed well coated with self esteem who does not feel a sense of inferiority in the presence of a jay. He is such a shrewd, independent and aggressive creature that one is inevitably led to the belief that he is more of a success as a bird than most men are as men. Conspicuous by voice and action during the fall and winter, when other birds are quietest, he becomes silent when other birds are most vocal. If he has a love song, it is reserved for the ear of his mate. At this season he even controls his fondness for owl baiting and with it his vituperative gifts. The robin, the catbird and the thrasher seem eager to betray the location of their nests to every passerby, but the bluejay gives no evidence of the site of his habitation by being seen in its vicinity.—Frank M. Chapman in Century.

A Precocious Diplomatist.

Boy—Oh, mamma, I upset the salt-cellar over my clean clothes.

Mamma—That was careless. Go and brush the salt off, and see you don't soil the clothes.

"But, mamma, when any one spills salt they have a quarrel, don't they?"

"So they say."

"Well, then, if they don't spill the salt they don't have a quarrel. Isn't that so?"

"Yes, that is so. But why do you ask?"

"Well, because, mamma, it wasn't the salt I spilt; it was the ink."

Zeal and Knowledge.

The Outlook crowds an unusual amount of practical wisdom and good sense into the following paragraph: "Zeal without knowledge, often condemned, is more valuable than knowledge without zeal, often commended, for zeal without knowledge inspires life, and life acquires knowledge; but knowledge without zeal sits in its study, plays with its books and does nothing. All the greatest things in life have been accomplished by enthusiasts whose zeal was greater than their knowledge."

GRADING CREAM.

Practical Way of Handling a Disagreeable Matter.

However desirable it may be to grade milk according to sweetness and cleanliness and manufacture the grades separately, the obstacles are so great that it is practically impossible, for it naturally has to go through one which can, and it is more than the always rushed butter maker can do to run is through different separators, hold in different vats and churn in different batches. But with gathered cream the limitations are not so strict. The cream does not all come at once or come with a rush, and two cream vats will accommodate two grades of cream, permitting separate churning and separate packing, with comparatively little additional work.

To pay the same price for rancid cream as for sweet cream is manifestly unfair and ruinous to the whole business, says Creamery Journal. To absolutely reject all off grade cream will improve the grade of butter made. But off flavored cream has some value, although less value than good cream. Only three things are possible—mix all together and damage the whole churning, return the poor grade and lose the patronage and insure heavy loss to the patron, or grade and pay for each grade according to approximate value.

It takes a man with a trained nose and trained taste to grade cream. It can be done by mechanical tests, but practically the human senses are to be relied upon, and a man without these senses well developed is out of place in a creamery. We are speaking of gathered cream plants and believe that an ambition to get into the best class, best in honors and best in payment, can be stimulated among the patrons and that time put in showing the patron how he can get there and stay there will be very profitably spent. This is something more than theory, for it has been made an accomplished fact in so many cases that it must be acknowledged to be practical. We do not mean that grading cream, holding in different vats and churning separately have become everyday practices in creameries, but that keeping out the worst and churning it afterward can be done and that rushing direct for the home of a patron with a road horse and road cart has done wonders in improving the cream of those patrons. In all such cases the butter maker should not stop to argue or talk much, but speak to the point and leave at once without listening to excuses or recriminating palaver.

Buyers Cows For Patrons.

A Salem (Or.) creamery operator has entered upon a plan for the development of the dairy interest of his neighborhood. Whenever he finds an industrious farmer who desires to purchase cows for a dairy herd, but who has not sufficient capital, the creamery man buys the necessary cows and then sells them to the farmer, taking a mortgage. This plan has been practiced previously by creamery men, notably large companies operating in Kansas, and has been found successful.

A hitherto unknown element in milk, a new ferment, has been discovered, called galactose, which is proving of value in the ripening of cheese. The properties of this ferment are similar to the secretion of the pancreatic organ in the human body. Old cheese is predigested food, and the digestion is wrought by the galactose. It was found that the galactose would go on working at very low temperatures, temperatures at which bacteria were practically inert. Cheese was put into refrigerators and kept frozen for months. Other cheese was kept just above the freezing point. It was found that the finest cheese is cured at from 40 to 45 degrees F. Practical cheese manufacturers had maintained that 50 degrees was the lowest temperature at which cheese could be worked without becoming bitter and worthless. The new discovery will, it is believed, revolutionize cheese manufacture, doing away with all curing rooms, the cheese being sent directly to the refrigerator.—Scribner's Magazine.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

Washington, D. C., July 16.
The president lost his seal ring during a recent cross country tramp and as he has offered a substantial reward for its recovery, the little boys of the neighborhood are raking over the territory with fine toothed combs. We suspect there is a mite of hero worship involved as well as the desire to secure the reward.

General Chaffee has impartially reviewed the court-martial trial of Major Waller and has in part disapproved the verdict of the court which exonerated that officer. General Chaffee says that while Major Waller was not guilty of murder in ordering Filipino prisoners executed, some minor offense should have been found by the court. General Chaffee in a graphic recital describes the suffering to which Waller and his men were subjected. He believed when he issued the death order that the natives concerned were convicting at the death of the Americans, but it is now stated that this was an error. On this point, General Chaffee says that Major Waller should have minutely informed himself, before issuing such a drastic order. General Chaffee does not hesitate to designate the findings of the court as a miscarriage of justice.

Minister Wu Ting Fang, who has been relieved as diplomatic representative from China to the United States, is ordered to a new duty which is considered of equal or of greater importance than his work here. The action of the Chinese government is learned with regret at Washington where Mr. Wu is a great favorite, his keen wit and immense fund of knowledge, both of things Oriental and Occidental marking him as an extraordinary personage. It is stated that the work to which he will be assigned is fraught with potent possibilities for China. He will be given the task of reforming the Chinese laws, for which he is eminently qualified, owing to his knowledge of the laws of the western and modern countries of the world.

Sir Liang Chen, the chief secretary of the Chinese Mission at Washington has been appointed in his stead as minister to the United States.

The republicans from New Jersey, the home of the trusts, announce that they will uphold the president in his fight against unwholesome combinations. All the congressional conventions, it is stated, will adopt strong anti-trust planks.

The United States, through Judge Taft, is insisting in firm tones upon the withdrawal of the friars from the Philippines. The friars have been at the bottom of a vast amount of trouble in the islands, and are cordially hated by a large proportion of the Filipinos. Judge Taft says that unless they are expelled it will lead to constant trouble, uprisings and bloodshed among the natives.

General Wood has been in close consultation with the president at Oyster Bay and it is rumored that he is a prospective member of the Isthmian canal commission—possibly the chairman of the commission—to have general charge of the canal construction.

The Pennsylvania railroad is arranging to spend $100,000,000 during the next three years in making improvements along its lines. This is certainly a substantial sign of belief in the probable continuance of national prosperity. No one can accuse the Pennsylvania railroad of being a spendthrift or a rainbow chaser.

The administration has prohibited the importation of snakes from the Philippine Islands. Thus are the rights and the industries of the plain people trampled upon by plutocracy.

Canada has been acting in a very nasty manner toward this country in the matter of the extradition of Greene and Gaylor, two notorious scoundrels. The Dominion seems, if anything, rather jealous of her reputation as being a safe harbor for absconding bank cashiers, embezzlers and the like.

That bright and scintillating beacon star of democracy, the re-elected Senator Carmack of Tennessee, has this early in his national political career fallen into the fateful habit of being newspaper interviewed and of prophesying. Evidently believing that Honorable James K. Jones can no longer correctly foretell the future, Mr. Carmack prances to the front with the startling announcement that "democratic prospects are very bright," believing as he does that "the American people will no longer submit to the republican policy of plunder."

The Marquis of Salisbury has retired from the British premiership. His official life has been marked by a constant and earnest effort to cultivate close and friendly relations between England and the United States.

The department of agriculture wants twelve able bodied young men to do nothing but eat, and it will pay well for the privilege of feeding them. However, they must eat what they are given. This is in connection with some experiments which the department is making, under direction of congress, in the effect upon the human system of foods which are "doctored" in which preservatives, coloring matter, etc., are used. The department is very active in its inspection of imported foods thought to be injuriously adulterated. On the other hand certain foreign countries use inspection of imported foods as an excuse for keeping out American products and in some of these cases retaliatory measures are being considered by the government. Germany is a country an enormous quantity of once upon a time inspection regulations have been imposed upon imported goods. A new German law which is about going into effect excludes from that country all American meats treated by the boric acid. The trouble was one of the German regulations has been not that doctored articles are refused admission, but that the American products known to be free therefrom, have been delayed and hindered and damaged by unnecessary restrictions. These regulations it seems have been enacted at the behest of the agrarian faction, which is opposed to free entry and competition of American products. G. E. M.

DOMINATED BY WOMEN.

A Welsh Town Where the Feminine Sex Reigns Supreme.

Away in a sequestered little nook on the Pembrokeshire coast there is a village entirely managed by women. In Langum—for such is the hamlet's name—woman reigns supreme. She is the dominating force of the mart of trade, the household financier, the family accountant, and, in fact, fills all the positions which in any other community, whether civilized or not, are by established precedent voted to man.

Langum has a race apart from the world in its laws in its exclusion of the stranger and in its utter disregard of the vast area of world and things lying beyond its borders. Its quiet life is dominated by two all powerful factors—womanhood and oysters. There are men in Langum, but they exert little or no influence upon the affairs of the quiet little Welsh village.

The Langum man neither is nor pretends to be. He recognizes the right of womanhood to own and rule and is perfectly satisfied to be described as Annie Jones' man or Mary Williams' man.

He neither requires nor appreciates compassion. Sitting on an evening at his cottage door, with his faithful brood playing around him, his wife and daughter busy within reckoning the gains of the day's work, he is vexed by no mental anxieties or perplexities. Divested of all responsibilities of life, he is as pleased as the oyster for which his native place is famed.—London Answers.

The Short Step Between.

"I was on an ocean liner when she ran on the rocks off the English coast some years ago," said a Philadelphia traveling man, "and in the panic that ensued there is one incident that stands out in my memory, illustrating the slender thread between the tragic and the ridiculous. We had a fellow on board who had managed to keep pretty well loaded all the way across, and when we struck the rocks he was in his usual condition. When everybody thought for sure we were going to the bottom, he sat down at the piano in the saloon, and what do you suppose he began playing? 'Home, Sweet Home.' Somebody went to him and begged him to stop. Immediately he switched off from the doleful strains of the old song to the rollicking melody of 'Down Went McGinty.' The absurdity of the thing seemed to strike everybody at once, and a general laugh followed. The tension was relieved, and there was good order after that."—Philadelphia Record.

Antidyspepsia Diet.

"Dyspepsia would no longer be the national disease in America if the people of this country would adopt a plain diet similar to that of Norway and Sweden. Gout is unknown among Swedes and Norwegians, and the rosy cheeks and clear complexions of the young people of those countries are the result of the simple food the children eat." The United States consul at Bergen, Norway, says, "Hot rolls and white bread are rarely seen in Sweden. Knackbrod or hard bread is the standard article of food. It is made of ground oats and rye. There is no yeast in the bread, and it is rolled into thin wafers, which are baked and hung up where they will keep perfectly dry. Swedes eat this bread and drink milk for two meals a day and have one meal at which they eat meat and potatoes. Sweets are almost unknown. Children are allowed to eat candy only on state occasions."

Why She Wanted an Introduction.

"I must have an introduction to that woman."
"Why, yes; certainly," replied her friend, and at once brought it about. Later she asked:
"What made you so keen about meeting Mrs. S.? You gazed at her as intently as if you could not take your eyes from her while you were talking. I never found her so interesting."
"Oh, I don't know whether she is interesting, but didn't you see that lovely tie she wore? I just had to find out how it was made. I know how to make one exactly like it now. Just let me clap my eyes on anything of that sort for a few minutes and I'll reproduce it so that you never could tell the copy from the original."—New York Press.

The Human Heart.

The heart of man is a book—nay, it is an encyclopedia of everything that has ever come within the range of its personal experience. It preserves an eternal record of all the stories in which it has played a part. It is strange what sad things may be hidden in its depths without giving any token of their existence. The heart may be gay and may send the smile mantling to the face, but all the while you see only the topmost stratum. If the graves beneath were to give up their dead, the smiles would seem strangely out of place.

Steel Skyscrapers.

An architect of New York says that with the modern steel frame a building can be carried to a height equal to seven and one-half times the diameter of the base. By this rule on an ordinary city block could be erected a building 1,500 feet high, 500 feet higher than the Eiffel tower. It would have 125 stories and cost about $30,000,000.

As a means of converting the raw products of the farm into more salable forms the good dairy cow is without a peer, says G. W. Holston, Dominion live stock commissioner. The good breeding animal will pay very little more than market prices for food fed from birth to shambles. The sheep, with fleece and lambs, gives only a very modest profit on food consumed. The pig and the hen, if wisely fed, do much better than either of the above, but it is very seldom that the returns from either go beyond $1.50 for $1 worth of food consumed. The dairy cow, however, frequently goes as high as $2 worth of products for $1 worth of food, and many a cow has been known to give $2.50 worth of products for $1 worth of food consumed.

Most herds fall far short of such a high return. The reasons may be summarized as lack of breeding, improper or insufficient feeding and lack of judgment and management. Every dairy herd should average over $50 worth of products per cow per year. If a herd is not giving such a return, it is not doing justice. Possibly every individual in the herd is not a No. 1 dairy cow, but do you know which are really doing good work and the relative merits of the different cows?

E. M. Barton of Illinois has been admired by many at state fairs. The cow Nicola, shown in the illustration, has been champion at the Illinois state fair and won many prizes. She has a beautiful head, fine nostrils, large and delicate ears and good size bones. Her udder is large, and her performance at the pail goes a long way to commend her as a dairy animal.—American Agriculturist.

Water Content of Butter.

The Canadian department of agriculture has been advised by cable through the high commissioner's office that the board of agriculture for Great Britain have made regulations under the sale of foods and drugs act, 1899, whereby if a sample of butter is found to contain over 16 per cent of water it shall be considered not genuine unless proved to the contrary.

Mr. J. A. Ruddle, chief of the Canadian dairy division and acting commissioner in Professor Robertson's absence, says the regulation will not affect the Canadian butter trade to any great extent unless dealers should require a guarantee that butter which they produce does not contain water in excess of the limit. With proper cooling facilities at the creameries, so that the churning, washing and working of the butter may be carried out at sufficiently low temperatures, there is no difficulty in producing a butter which is well within the limits as regards the amount of water in it. From 12 to 13 per cent is considered to be about the proper proportion of water in butter.

Yields of Cheese From Milk.

With ordinary milk the yield is about 2.5 pounds of cured cheese for each pound of butter fat in the milk. The per cent of butter fat in different milks very nearly determines their relative values for cheesemaking. Professor Van Slyke found by a series of careful experiments that with milk ranging from 3.4 per cent to 4.4 per cent the amount to each pound of butter fat was 2.72 pounds of green cheese or 2.5 pounds cured five weeks. It was found that 5 per cent milk made but 2.4 pounds of cured cheese for each pound of butter fat, but the better quality of the cheese from the richer milk was thought to compensate for the slight difference in quantity. It will be seen that a hundred pounds of 4 per cent milk made ten pounds of cheese and a hundred pounds of 5 per cent milk made twelve pounds of cheese.

Feeding the Calf.

We cannot afford to keep the calf on the cow, as that is too expensive, so we must use some more economical method. The common practice in this vicinity is to raise them on skim milk. In some cases a feeder is used, but in most instances they are taught to drink, writes C. H. Dole in the New England Homestead.

My method is to take the calf away from the cow soon after it is dropped. I milk the cow and feed the milk to the calf in this way. I put my finger in the calf's mouth and work its nose into the pail and after it gets to eating well I take my finger away. After a few trials the calf will drink all right. I give it the milk of the cow for a few days until it is good to use and then change to skim milk, warming the milk to the temperature of the milk drawn from the cow.

METAPHOR OF THE SEA.

Terms Associated With the Water That Are Very Expressive.

"Let me put in my oar," said a gentleman as he joined three of his acquaintances in the hotel cafe the other night and took a seat at a table with them.

"That is about the twentieth metaphor of that sort that I have heard to-night," answered one of the others, "and it seems so strange that we should borrow so many of our figures from the sea. I never thought of it before, but it is curious. I have never been closely associated with the water, and I don't believe any of us have, and yet we are using sea terms all of the time. They are wonderfully expressive, too, and I don't know what we would do without them."

"You want to put in 'your oar,' a moment ago some one talked about being 'all adrift,' and I admitted that I was 'at sea.' We talk about our 'weather eye,' being 'spliced,' our 'mainstay' and all that sort of stuff. We know what it is to 'cast an anchor to windward,' to 'back and fill,' to 'steer' through, to be 'taken aback' and to have 'the wind taken out of our sails.'"

"We 'spla' a yarn,' try 'the other tack,' 'launch' enterprises, get them 'under full sail' and often 'wreck' them. We cry for 'any port in a storm,' 'take in a reef,' get to our 'ropes' end,' 'run before the wind' and sometimes 'keel over.' So it goes on until I believe we can talk about almost everything in the language of the sea."—St. Louis Republic.

Choosing a Minister.

The parish kirk of Drelichton had been rather unfortunate in its ministers, two of them having gone off in decline within a twelvemonth of their appointment, and now, after hearing a number of candidates for the vacancy, the members were looking forward with keen interest to the meeting at which the election of the new minister was to take place.

"Weel, Marget," asked one female parishioner of another as they foregathered on the road one day, "wha are you gaun to vote for?"

"I'm just thinkin' I'll vote for none o' them. I'm no' muckle o' a judge, an' it'll be the safest plan," was Marget's sagacious reply.

"Toots, woman, if that's the way o't, vote wi' me."

"An' hoo are you gaun to vote?" "I'm gaun to vote for the man that I think has the soundest lungs an' 'll no' bother us wi' declin' again in a hurry."—Scottish American.

Mr. L. T. Wilson sailmaker on Market street, says:—"I contracted a very bad cold which effected me in the lungs and in the upper part of the chest, causing distressing lameness, some urinary difficulty, and I was quite suffered up. As I had read considerable about Doan's Kidney Pills, I went to Philbrick's pharmacy and got a box. They went to the spot at once, and I did not use but part of the box before I was quite over my trouble. I leave the balance of my box to a friend and there was plenty to cure him, although neither of us are very light weights. I am prepared from personal experience and that of others to highly recommend Doan's Kidney Pills. You can refer to me."

TUESDAY, JULY 22, 1902.

Secretary Root in rejecting all offers to travel by train and insisting upon taking his Virginia trip of inspection in a mule-drawn ambulance, merely pays proper official tribute to a national figure. In which of our new army reservations will be erected the first statue to that neglected hero, the American mule?

Oats are higher than they have been since 1874, and corn is out of the question for the mangle menus of any save thoroughbred and speedway aristocrats. If the horses could talk, what a neighing would be heard about the illegal and oppressive combination in restraint of feed formed by that outrageous old octopus Dame Nature, in league with that soulless tyrant the farmer.

Lawlessness begets lawlessness. One lynching by a gang of men will do more to demoralize the law and to arouse and rally the lawless element than the individual acts of a greater number of lawless men. It is, therefore, necessary to the protection of our institutions, to the maintenance of our system of laws, that public sentiment shall always be behind the law and its sure support.

A general strike in Cienfuegos, Cuba, which commenced in a strike of the men employed in handling timber, has been ended, and the butchers, bakers, teamsters, cooks and longshoremen, who struck in sympathy, have all returned to work. The strike of the timber handlers was the most successful one reported of late, for whereas they formerly received but one dollar a day, in silver, they now get two dollars a day in American gold. It seems evident that the difference between the pay they formerly received, and the amount they earned and which the employers could afford to pay them, was so great as to fully justify them in striking. The increase from one dollar in silver to two dollars in gold shows that they were enormously underpaid.

CLIPPINGS.

The men who have been conscripted in the Kansas wheat fields will be sure to come out red-hot Bryanites.—Washington Post.

The postmaster general has decided that the people must erect mail boxes at their own expense if they want free delivery. Free delivery isn't entirely free then, after all.—Portland Express.

Before that enterprising American free company can find a market in Europe, it will have to dislodge the European notion that an ice cream is a deadly poison.—Montreal Star.

An item now going the rounds of the newspapers says that Prince Albert of Thurn and Taxis, Germany, has a new suit of clothes every day, and one thousand new neckties and two hundred new pairs of boots in a year. And yet there are men now working for nine dollars a week who think they would like to try the prince's business for a change. Think of having to break in two pairs of new boots every three days.—Bridgford Journal.

Gerónimo, the Apache, will not be sent after Tracy, the outlaw, for then the government would have to find someone to send after Gerónimo, and it might be more difficult to catch two desperadoes than one. The Indian states is not that the only good Indian is a dead one, but it is something very near that.—Haverhill Gazette.

Mr. Tracy of the Oregon and Washington wilderness will be ready to go on the stage or write for the magazines any time those depths will stop pecking him.—Keeneland Journal.

Senator Carmack of Tennessee insists that imperialism overshadows all other issues. Doubtless in his mind he is like the quack whose method was to scare his patient into fits—and he was death on fits.—Portland Advertiser.

The people of England do not like it that J. P. Morgan has pocketed Britain's auxiliary navy; but much as he has done so, they invite him to dinner, with the idea that he will be better natured if not allowed to get too hungry. That is a view of the case which comes very natural to a lion.—Boston Advertiser.

Sixty-nine Colonels and one Brigadier-General compose the staff of Gov. Chandler. It is perhaps the largest staff of military men in the United States, and perhaps in the world. The Colonels have been appointed by the Governor since he went into office, four years ago, and it may be that he will name several more before the expiration of his term.—Atlanta Journal.

There are wise and solemn men who disbelieve in what is called Luck, swear that there isn't any such thing and teach their young that success is due to virtue and industry alone. Now, last week a gas and oil company was putting down a test well in Ohio. What was struck? O, nothing but gold and coal. We don't say there was any Luck about the matter, but it is curious how some folks find things and how the treasures in the bowels of the earth rush out at 'em. For example, Col. Jim Coffey of Pennsylvania and various other states. He was proposing for zinc in Arkansas last winter. One very cold day what was his surprise and pleasure to find coal, wood and soapstone on the same spot. If this is not Luck, it is Genius.—New York Sun.

A BOYS ESSAY ON NEWSPAPERS

A teacher of a public school in Northampton, Mass., recently submitted to her class a number of questions not in the text books, and requested that the answers be returned in manuscript. Among the subjects was this question: "What Are Newspapers?" A bright boy handed in the following essay:

"Newspapers are sheets of paper on which stuff to read is printed. The men look over the paper to see if their names is in it, and the women use it to put on shelves and such. I don't know how newspapers came into the world. The Bible says nothing about editors, and I never heard of one being in Heaven. I guess the editors is the missing link them fellers talk about. The first editor I ever heard of was the feller who wrote up the flood. He has been here ever since.

"Some editors belong to church and some try to raise whiskers. Editors never die. At least I never saw a dead one. Sometimes the paper dies and then people feel glad, but some one starts it up again. Editors never went to school because editors never got licked. Our paper is a mighty poor one, but we take it so ma can use it on our pantry shelves. Our editor don't amount to much, but paw says he never had a good chance when he was a boy. He goes without underclothes in winter, has no socks, and has a wife to support him. Paw hasn't paid his subscription in five years, and don't intend to."—Editor and Publisher.

LITERARY NOTES FROM THE CENTURY COMPANY.

To The Century's "Year of American Humor" the August number adds three contributions of special interest—(1) a poem by Thomas Bailey Aldrich entitled "In the Far East," decorated with Japanese motives by Alfred Bannan, and beginning "Clorinda and Ann they have gone to Japan."

To study the language and see what they can; And when they return we shall probably learn (11) an Uncle Remus poem by Joel Chandler Harris entitled "A Wishing Song," with a full page picture by A. B. Frost of "Ivory Rabbit" in the attitude of wishing:

"After us de spring for a lookin' glass—
A-wish, wish, wishin'—
Mr. Rabbit tuk a walk on de' pastur' grass—
A-wish, wish, wishin'—
De gals come along—Will you let us pass—
Des a-wishin'!"

(12) an anecdotal paper by Joel Benton on "P. T. Barnum, Showman and Humorist," characters in which Mr. Barnum seemed equally at home. This article is also fully illustrated, the broad place showing one of Barnum's elephants engaged in plowing at Bridgeport in full sight of passing trains. In addition to these, there is the usual variety of the department "In Light of," which this month includes contributions from Carolyn Wells, Jennie Betts Hartswick, Palmer Cox (a picture of "The Brownies' Automobile Club"), and Charles Hattell Loomis ("The Mother of Little Maude and Little Maude").

ON THE DIAMOND.

The Connecticut league appears to be having a successful season.

The Maplewoods are trying to secure the Exeter Clippers for a baseball game at the Plains on Saturday.

Rollins, Cowden and McKernon, late of the Raleigh team of the defunct North Carolina league have joined the Fall Rivers.

If the weather will allow it, the Boston Nationals and the Manchester New England league team will cross bats this afternoon at Manchester.

Delahanty and Lajoie are tied for first batting honors in the American league with averages of .407 each. Ray who was not considered good enough for the Cincinnati aggregation of misfits, ranks third, with an average of .377.

That was a mean trick which was played on Captain Bannan of the Nashua team. A few days ago Secretary Morse of the New England league announced Bannan's indefinite suspension.

The cause of the suspension was a mystery. It now appears that sometime since the manager of the Colorado Springs team of the Western league received a telegram offering him the services of Bannan, Covey and Hafford of the Nashua team. The telegram was signed by Bannan himself.

The western manager made a few inquiries of Secretary Morse, and as the evidence indicated that Bannan intended to jump Nashua, and to try to induce the others to jump with him, he was summarily punished. Later developments, however, seem to prove that the telegram was not sent by Bannan, but by one Callahan, who was released by Nashua a short time ago. Hafford and Covey confess that Callahan tried to induce them to jump their contracts with Nashua, and admit that they intended to do so but changed their minds. They both assert that the telegram was sent by Callahan, and it is supposed that the chief conspirator intended to represent Bannan himself. Bannan's suspension will undoubtedly be raised.

LINCOLN'S PRESCRIPTION.

To an Illinois farmer who complained of being in poor health, Abraham Lincoln once wrote the following excellent advice:

"Do not worry. Eat three square meals a day. Say your prayers. Think of your wife. Be courteous to your creditors. Keep your digestion good. Steer clear of billiouness. Exercise. Go slow and go easy. Maybe there are other things that your special case requires to make you happy; but my dear friend, these, I reckon, will give you a good hint."

A GENEROUS MILLIONAIRE.

John M. Burke, a retired merchant and railroad director, of New York, celebrated his ninety-first birthday on July 4 by announcing a gift of $1,000,000 worth of property for founding and endowing a convalescent home "for intelligent and respectable men and women, who, in consequence of illness, or discharge from hospital before they have gained sufficient strength to earn their livelihood, or in consequence of other misfortunes, may be in need of temporary assistance." Among the intentions of the founder is that provision shall be made for the reception of all children not proper subjects for any existing hospital, and for supplying nurses at a moderate cost to families, having cases requiring special treatment.

CAMP MEETING AT OLD ORCHARD, ME., JULY 27TH TO AUGUST 12TH.

The announcement is made that Old Orchard, Me., will hold her first camp meeting July 27th to August 12th.

Old Orchard needs no praise as a camp meeting ground, and the Alliance Camp Meeting on the above dates should attract quite a number of followers to this most delightful resort.

Round trip tickets good July 27th to August 12th, inclusive, and returning July 27th to August 12th, inclusive, will be on sale at reduced rates at Boston city ticket office, 222 Washington street, and Boston Union station, also at many of the principal stations on the Boston & Maine railroad. Tickets will be good going and returning on regular trains.

MARCONI'S PARENTAGE.

Marconi, it may not be generally known, is only half an Italian. His mother was an Irish girl, Annie Jamison, the daughter of John Jamison, a liquor manufacturer of Dublin. There is said to have been for generations a legend in the family to the effect that one of her great-grandmothers prophesied that one of her descendants would become famous. If John Jamison did not fill the bill with his wireless telegraph, Marconi has certainly done so with his wireless telegraph.—Springfield Republican.

As His Child Saw Him.

A prominent real estate man in Los Angeles had an experience a few evenings ago that kept him guessing for a little bit as to whether he should feel complimented or otherwise. He was at home with one little daughter while his wife and another of the children were downtown. Darkness was coming on, and the little girl was anxiously watching for her mother's return. Her nervousness grew apace in spite of the father's attempts at reassurance. At length the little one burst into tears, saying:

"I just can't help it! I need mamma, and I must have her!"

"Do you do this way when your mamma is here and I'm away?" asked the father.

"No, of course not," replied the little one, "because then there's some grown-up person about the house!"—Los Angeles Herald.

No Sunset For Five Days.

At the head of the gulf of Bothnia there is a mountain on the summit of which the sun shines perpetually during the five days of June 19, 20, 21, 22 and 23. Every six hours during this season of continual sunshine a steamer leaves Stockholm crowded with visitors anxious to witness the phenomenon. At the same place during winter the sun disappears and is not seen for weeks. Then it comes in sight again for ten, fifteen or twenty minutes, gradually lengthening its stay until finally it stays in sight continuously for upward of 120 hours.

Language.

"It's wonderful," said the meditative man, "how one small word, insignificant in itself, may induce an endless train of thought, speaking volumes in fact."

"Yes," replied the caustic man. "Take the word 'but,' for instance, when a woman says, 'Of course, it's none of my business, but'"—Exchange.

Profitable Walnut Trees.

The English walnut is said to be the most profitable of all nut bearing trees. When in full vigor, they will yield about 300 pounds of nuts to the tree.

The nuts sell on an average at about fourpence per pound. If only twenty-seven trees are planted on an acre, the income would be about £135 per acre.—London Answers.

A STORY OF HENRY BERGH.

One of His New York Experiences in Protecting Dumb Animals.

Like a well dressed, singular ghost he went striding down the snowy street, and at University place he found the thing he had expected—a car packed inside almost to suffocation, both platforms packed outside, with men clatting like big birds to bottom steps and dashboards rails, and before it, within a cloud of steam, two ill fed, bony horses with bloodshot eyes and wide, red nostrils staring in their effort to fill laboring lungs with air, with heaving sides and straining backs and flanks, while their madly scrambling feet struck fire from the slippery stones as they strove in vain to start again the awful weight behind them. Curses, odd jerked bell and assisting yells of passengers failed of effect. The driver's whip was raised ready for the stinging blow, when suddenly the straining effort ceased, the horses' heads drooped low, and through the thick air there loomed up before them a tall, dark form, with hand upraised commandingly. And calm and distinct two laconic words reached all ears: "Stop! Unload!"

"Who the blank are you?" furiously demanding the driver. "And where's your authority for interfering with this trip?"

He knew well enough whom he was talking to, so silently Mr. Bergh turned back the lapel of his coat to show his badge, for in those days he had to do constabulary work as well as official,

then repeated, "Unload!"

But, being tired, hungry and mad,

the floodgates gave way, and the pas-

THE "SANKERO."

Unhappy Lot of a Peculiar Figure of the Irrigation Country.

An eastern farmer coming to an irrigated water land finds everything as different from his accustomed life as he can well imagine. He must learn an entirely new language of farming and a new set of farming rules. His neigh-ber greets him, not with the remark,

"It looks like rain," but "Have you heard when the water is coming in?"

or "The ditches are low today." He learns to speak of miners' ditches and not of water, and he can soon tell at a glance whether a ditch is conveying 50 or 100 miners' inches of water. He hears wide discussions of headwaters, weirs, laterals and canals.

He finds that he is "under" a certain canal, which by and by will come to seem to him like an inexorable fate.

He will very promptly make the acquaintance of the king of the irrigated land, the zanjero, in Arizona called "sankero," in California sometimes shortened to "sanky," the water master or ditch rider, a bronzed man in overalls and sombrero, who drives about in a two wheeled cart, with a shovel and a long crooked lined fork by his side and precious keys in his pockets. He is the yea and nay of the arid land, the Washington, July 21.—Forecast for New England: Rain Tuesday, followed by fair and warmer Wednesday; fresh west winds.

TUESDAY, JULY 22, 1902.

CITY BRIEFS.

The end of July is now in sight. This is the last full week of July. The first golden rod is appearing. The camping season will soon begin. There has been no lack of rain this summer.

The literary colony over in York is growing in numbers. Have your shoes repaired by John Mott, 34 Congress street.

People returning from the lakes say that the fish are biting well. It looks as if Portsmouth had entered upon an era of prosperity.

There were comparatively few people on the streets Monday evening.

A large flock of sheep was driven through the streets on Monday evening.

Foster, the weather prophet, promises some real summer weather this week.

No matter how many papers you take, you cannot afford to be without the Herald.

Some of the local coal dealers are shipping coal into the northern part of the state in barrels.

Women love a clear, healthy complexion. Pure blood makes it. Burdock Blood Bitters makes pure blood.

The predictions that July would be a cold, rainy month for the most part, have been fulfilled up to date.

The veterinary surgeons are kept very busy these days by an epidemic of influenza among horses and cattle.

The price on poultry still remains about the same, while the price on meats keeps going higher and higher.

A drunken man who had raised strenuous objections to paying his board was lodged in the police station Monday night.

A wheelman's tool bag isn't complete without a bottle of Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil. Heals cuts, bruises, stings, sprains. Monarch over pain.

The organ recital at Christ church on Sunday evening is described by those who were present as remarkably fine. The work of Mr. Smith, the organist, was of a high order. A vocal solo was rendered by Mr. Eastman.

HIS WIFE WAS AWAY.

"Has your wife gone away?" asked a man of one of his friends, the other evening. The reply was a feeble "Yes." "You might wonder why I asked that question," said the man who was after information, "but this summer I have noticed that nine times out of ten when you see the average citizen down street in the evening dressed up in his best suit, his family has gone away for the summer. One evening at the beach last week, there was a bunch of six married men who were having an evening's outing and trying to make the pleasant while their families were away."

SHE WAS A CENTENARIAN.

Mrs. Mary Carlin, for forty years a resident of Exeter, who died in East Boston July 16 and was buried in Exeter last Friday, was a centenarian, having been born in Cork county, Ireland, Jan. 8, 1802. From the known ages of her five children and her appearance it was manifest that her age was extreme and a grandson, who had the parish records in Ireland consulted has just been informed that Mrs. Carlin was born on the date above given. The age given in obituary notices was conjectural.

SHE BOSSES THE JOB.

The lawn about the city are looking finely now. The reason for it is that the woman of the house generally sees to it that her husband manipulates the lawn mower regularly while she sits on the front doorstep and bosses the job.

PETITION WAS GRANTED.

Street Railway Can Relay Its Tracks On Market Square.

Space Between Them Will Be Widened Two Feet.

This Is In Anticipation Of Second Step On The Cars.

A special meeting of the board of mayor and aldermen was held at the city building this forenoon at ten o'clock, for the purpose of hearing the petition of the Boston and Maine railroad for a relocation of their tracks on Market square—to wit, the widening the distance between their tracks two feet.

Mayor Pender presided and Aldermen Lester, Martin, Knight, Bailey, Smith and Woods were present when the meeting was called to order, Ald. E. H. Adams coming in later.

Mayor Pender stated the object of the meeting and called on Judge Page, attorney for the Boston and Maine railroad. Judge Page stated that he would not take up the time of the board in any lengthy remarks, as Superintendent Howard was present and ready to answer all questions.

In regard to the placing of a second step on the cars Supt. Howard stated that the matter had not been officially discussed, but was under consideration locally and no doubt would come in the future.

Ald. Wood—If at any time the city of Portsmouth should want to pave Market square and Congress street, would the Boston and Maine be willing to pave between their rails?

Supt. Howard said that he could not answer that question with authority. Judge Page said that the law gave the mayor and aldermen power to call upon the road to pave at any time, but that the road could appeal to the railroad commissioners if they had a grievance.

Ald. Smith stated that Civil Engineer Thompson was in favor of paving, as it was cheaper than crushed stone in the end.

Judge Page—"I don't think you will have any trouble with the road over paving. It would be cheaper for them to pave than to call on the commissioners."

Mayor Pender—"Judge Page is an expert on these matters."

Ald. Wood—"I am in favor of granting the petition providing the road agrees to pave between the rails and eighteen inches outside of each rail at any time the city decides to pave Market square and Congress street, and I make this a motion."

The motion was carried and inserted in the prepared record which Judge Page had with him.

Ald. Martin—"I would like to add to that that the road relay the strip of concrete on the square at each side of the cars. At the present time the strip is only fifteen inches wide and so near the cars that the ladies' dresses brush against the car steps."

This was discussed by all concerned and it was finally agreed that the road should be asked to concrete a strip fifteen feet in width and ten feet long, each side of the street crossing on Market square.

The petition was then unanimously granted and signed by the aldermen.

MUSICAL FESTIVAL.

A Great Treat Will Be Offered at Hampton Beach.

Henri G. Blaisdell of Concord was in Exeter Monday for the purpose of making preliminary arrangements for this summer's Hampton beach musical festival to be given from Aug. 18 to Aug. 24 inclusive. The greatest musical treat ever offered in Rockingham county is promised by Mr. Blaisdell. In the arrangement of the plans there is a little variance this year from last. The work will be entirely devoted to make the usual vaudeville entertainment being omitted for the time mentioned. The chorus will be limited, and will be assisted by the New England Philharmonic orchestra of twenty-five pieces, and a number of favorite soloists, who are yet to be announced. Last season the orchestra and the festival filled two separate weeks, but this summer the two attractions will be combined.

Fourteen concerts will be given during the seven days, the last, on Sunday evening, being devoted to sacred music. The chorus will attempt no great works, but excerpts from the Italian and German operas and from the leading oratorios will be produced. Some popular selections will also be given, there being a change of style at each concert. The chorus as in the past five years, will be conducted by Mr. Blaisdell. Already sixteen singers from Beverly, Mass., who will join, have engaged rooms.

POLICE COURT.

Simes was then arraigned upon the charge of drunkenness and fined $3 and costs taxed at $6.13.

SAID BY AN EXPERT.

Peter S. McNally Explodes Some Swimming Myths.

The Proper Way To Rescue Persons Who Are Drowning.

Common Notions Regarding The "Death Grip" Are Mischievous.

This is the season of bathing and there are many things connected with swimming which are unknown to thousands of its devotees. Peter S. McNally, who is one of the finest long-distance swimmers in the world, and also a life saver of wide reputation, who recently paid a visit to this city with the Forepaugh & Sells Bros. show, explodes many popular myths concerning the exercise.

Mr. McNally has had ample opportunity to observe the sport in all its phases, as he has been a medal from the Humane society for saving forty-seven lives between 1872 and 1886, and has made a total of 300 rescues. He was for two years chief instructor of swimming at the Boston public baths. Mr. McNally also holds several remarkable records for long-distance swimming.

Speaking of the many erroneous impressions about swimming, Mr. McNally asserts that the idea that many people are overcome by cramp while swimming, and are drowned in consequence, is wrong. "As a matter of fact," declares Mr. McNally, "there is only one form of cramp that is fatal to the swimmer, and that is cramp of the stomach, which is almost as rare as hen's teeth."

"Cramp in the leg or arm is painful, but not dangerous. When a swimmer is attacked by such local cramps he will not go right to the bottom without an effort. These cramps last but a short time and can be worked out if the swimmer will stand the brief pain."

"People's minds have been so poisoned by these cramp stories that there have been cases of drowning as a result of the fear and excitement brought on by slight cramp in the leg or arm."

"A mistaken impression about swimming rescues which has caused the loss of many lives is the belief in the celebrated but nonexistent death grip. This belief has caused many people who would have attempted rescues to keep away for fear they might be carried down in the grip, and it has also caused others who did make the attempt to go about it the wrong way."

"People in the water who are drowning may catch hold of you, but not in the way we hear so much about, by which the two go down to their deaths locked in an unbreakable grip. All muscular action depends on the will, and when a man becomes unconscious his muscles relax, so that no two people could go to the bottom wrapped in each other's arms, and stay there in that position. Dickens did not stop to think of this fact when he killed Bradley Headstone and Roger Riddlehood."

The best way to make a rescue is to swim on your back, holding the other person on his back and with his head about the middle of your body. This gives you a free hand, and you have your man in such a position that he cannot interfere with your movements by grabbing your legs.

"Everybody has heard the tale that a drowning man comes to the top three times before going down forever. There is little foundation for such a superstition. A man may go down once and never come up again, or he may come up more than three times. It all depends on the vitality of the individual and his luck in catching his breath as he rises to the top of the water."

"It is a pity to explode the stories which have been told about rescuers having to knock out the drowning persons, but it must be done, for such a feat is utterly impossible."

"In the first place, not one person in a hundred knows exactly where to land a knockout blow, and in the second place both persons being in a yielding substance, which practically offers no resistance as lacking for a blow, no man, even though a trained, scientific fighter, could deliver a blow in the water hard enough to produce unconsciousness."

"If the drowning man grabs you, you can make him let go by pressing him hard with the thumbs in the little hole just where the ear joins the jaw. Pressure there will produce such pain that the victim will involuntarily break the grip on your hand or leg to put his hand up to the source of the pain."

"Another fallacy is that drowning people throw up their hands just as they start to sink. The fact is one which only a good swimmer can perform, and will not be done by a man who is drowning, because he is not a good swimmer. To throw up your hands out of the water you must 'tread water.'"

"A peculiar thing about drowned people is that women always float face up and men float face down, which is due to the difference in the construction of the body."

"Again, women swim with the instep, making a straight backward and forward stroke with the legs, while a man propels himself with the sole of his foot and describes circles with his legs."

WHERE IS THAT HAMMOCK?

Some of the residents of Myrtle avenue are wondering what became of the hammock that so mysteriously disappeared from a piazza there one night last week. A vigorous search failed to reveal any trace of the missing article, and it looks as though somebody was out just about the price of a new one.

It was a narrow escape from instant death, as had the boy been standing a few inches nearer his entire skull would have been crushed in.
